Undergraduate Calculator Policy

1. For each timed, invigilated item of assessment, such as a final examination or midterm test, it is your individual responsibility to check whether the use of a calculator is permitted.
2. If calculators are permitted, then you may receive instructions from the module organiser about which types are allowed.
3. Absent such instructions, only non programmable calculators are permitted.

Programmable calculators are heavier, may have a larger screen and may have a charging port or memory card slot.
Non-programmable calculators are lighter and have less functions. They do not have the capability to store text, or an internet connection.

4. Programmable calculators are not allowed during any exam unless explicitly stated on the front of your question paper and will be confiscated.
5. You cannot use a programmable calculator on 'exam mode' or with the memory wiped.
6. An invigilator will check your calculator during the assessment. If your device is not permitted, it will be confiscated and this will be taken forward as academic misconduct.
7. You are responsible for ensuring that your calculator is in working order.
8. On your assessment script, you must state clearly the model of any calculator used.
9. Non-programmable calculators are available to borrow from the Economics & Finance school office, Graduate Centre 306.
