

COM5200 Colonial Literatures, Post Colonial Perspectives

This module will introduce students to a selection of texts written in the context of European colonization and its aftermath. We will cover topics such as anti-colonial resistance, neo-colonialism, postcolonial ecocriticism and the ongoing colonization of Indigenous peoples. The focus of the module is on non-European authors, and by extension upon the experience of colonialism and its aftermath from a non-European perspective. This semester we will study texts from South Asia, North Africa, West Africa, and the Anglophone Caribbean among others. Texts will be contextualised in relation to the history of European colonisation within the relevant regions, and will also involve some consideration of post-colonial theory and its broader relevance to the discipline of Comparative Literature.
